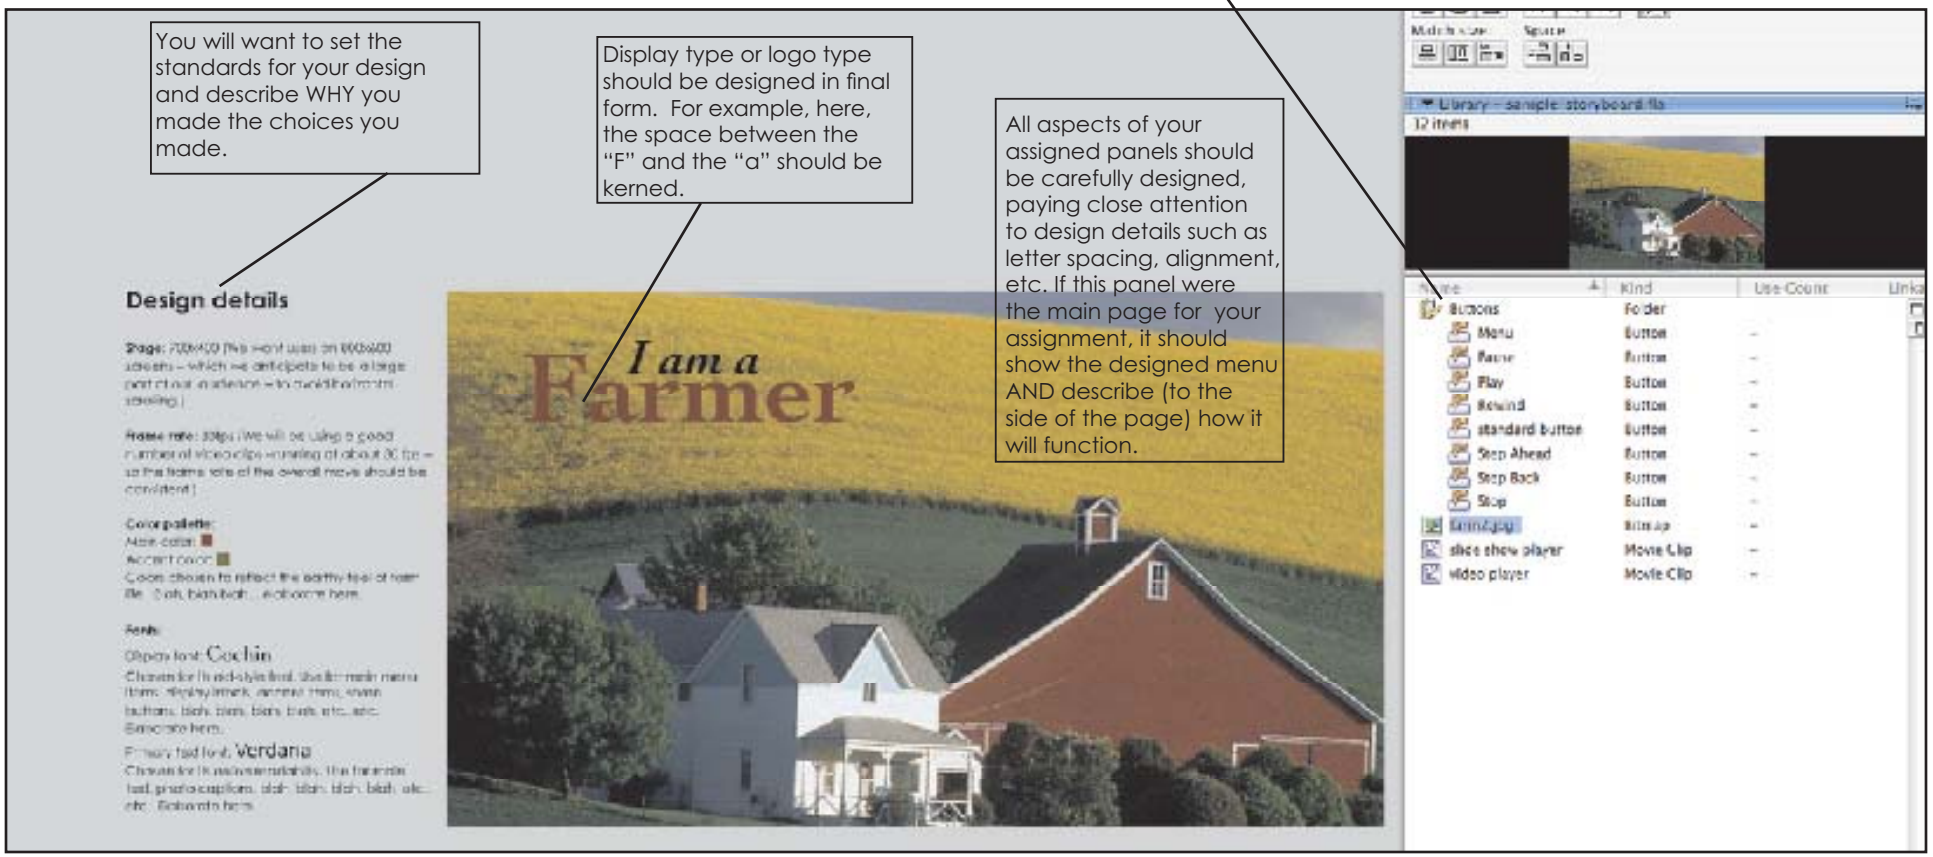
Storyboard assignment pointers

Be sure to desgin all standing elements. You can place them in the library in Flash, or off to the side of your page if you use Illustrator, InDesign or Freehand or another graphics program.

You will want to set the standards for your design and describe WHY you made the choices you made.

Display type or logo type should be designed in final form. For example, here, the space between the "F" and the "a" should be kerned.


All aspects of your assigned panels should be carefully designed, paying close attention to design details such as letter spacing, alignment, etc. If this panel were the main page for your assignment, it should show the designed menu AND describe (to the side of the page) how it will function.
